

Abstract of the Disclosure

A system for identifying problems in networks receives test data which may include statistical information regarding packet loss on a path. The system creates a signature from the test data and compares the signature to example signatures corresponding to various network conditions. The system identifies one or more of the example signatures which match the test signature. The system may comprise an expert system which applies rules to identify an example signature that the test signature best matches.